Dear Regeneron,

I am a third year Computer Science major attending Rochester Institute of Technology. I originally heard about the company through Career week on MyCareerConnect and decided to attend the information session on 09/23/20 from 4:00pm to 5:00pm. I found this meeting highly engaging, informative and the session really made it seem like Regeneron was different from other big Pharma companies.

My two strongest skills are communication and ability to learn. I am an out-going person and I am not afraid to speak in front of others or express my ideas. I have had practice explaining difficult coding ideas through my work experience of being a lab instructor at R.I.T. and have taken classes that require presentations. I consistently communicate with co-workers to maximize a students' success in the class through emails, Slack, and Discord. Furthermore, I am not afraid of asking questions to those around me because I have come to learn that using my resources will always be beneficial.

I started learning Computer Science my freshman year of college and it was not easy. However, through perseverance and seeking out help through my professors and online resources I have become a very strong student within my major. I may not necessarily have as much work or real life experience as others, but with some time to learn the concepts and adjust I can become a great asset to Regeneron. I look forward to hearing back from Regeneron!
